TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 7.

The meli nebely days are come, The eaddest of the year, When tionica fail and girls sneaumb To dull rautine and care. When locals cease and editors

Begin to tear their hair, And vainly seratch their empty heads To find a local there.

Alas no more the burning sun, Shall warm the rich and poer When fitty cents alone will bring The fuel to your door.

Spring chickens too that lingered long At length have disappeared, And left the preachers all in grief At the less of such a bird.

Farewell, old Sol, whose burning ray Hath split the rocks in twain, Farewell, the lightning's vivid flash The thunder and the rain.

Adieu ye flowers which so late Could rival heauty's check, The thip of Time sails on nithough The year hath sprung a leak.
